

Sun MAGAZINE

SPECIAL PULLOUT
SECTION

● Harrison Ford who came down to earth from the Star Wars trilogy as the hero in Raiders Of The Lost Ark is again cracking the whip.

● He's a real glutton for punishment in the new adventure movie Indiana Jones And The Temple Of Doom which opens at the Forum on July 19.

Crack that whip and jam the battered old fedora on your head.

Throw out a prayer for survival and then hack your way through the jungle to retrieve the priceless crown of jewels.

And, at the same time, rescue a maiden in distress — in the company of Indiana Jones, of course.

Yes, he's back again. Complete with bull whip, the hat that looks that it's been kicked from here to kingdom come and back — and a look on his handsome face that tells you its owner is about to have something similar happen to him — because Indiana Jones gets bruised.

"Boy, no fat guy gets bruised," Harrison Ford says.

He goes on: "It's OK. That's what I'm here for. That's why people like him so much. He gets hurt, see?"

"Everyone can identify with him. But he's also determined, that's why I like him. Just won't give up whatever they throw at him."

He's not kidding. In the new adventure-thriller, Indiana Jones And The Temple Of Doom, they really throw the works at him.

Shrugging off the 1001 deaths he nearly died in Raiders Of The Lost Ark, our bruised and battered hero is back on the trail again — a real glutton for punishment.

An archaeologist turned fortune-hunter, he has the help of only Small Round (a young Chinese, real name Ke Huy Quan) as he sets out to save the screaming lady (a night club singer played by Turk actress Kate Capshaw.)

And on the way, he'll make another small fortune for himself in the muscular real-life figure of Harrison Ford, the quiet man actor they're calling the new Bogart.

What happens to him? Harrison Ford counts off perils on the fingers of both hands.

"Oh, I'm attacked by Thuggees," he said.

"You know them? They

HARRISON FORD in a scene from Indiana Jones And The Temple Of Doom.

Whip-cracking hero back on adventure trail are the notorious assassins of India? The guys who creep up behind you in dark alleys and doorways to slice your throat with strands of wire."

How about stampeding elephants? The film is set in India and you can't let Indiana Jones get away without at least one herd of runaway elephants on the loose.

The deep brown eyes brighten. "Sure we've got a bunch of them. I have to fight a battle on their backs," he recalls.

Hunky Harrison Ford is the new-style hero showing real guts in a fantasy straight out of Boys Own paper who has brought a lot of fun as well as the thrills back into movies.

He earned his stripes on a time warp in outer space as reluctant hero Han Solo in the epic Star Wars trilogy.

And through it he became a folk hero to the young — and to millions of young-at-hearters of all ages.

Down to earth again the legend goes on. The monsters in the $25 million Temple Of Doom come popping out of the expensive woodwork.

● Continued over page

RIGHT: Attractive KATE CAPSHAW and KE HUY QUAN in Temple Of Doom.

INSIDE

FIND A PERFECT MATCH WITH THE HELP OF OUR STAR GUIDE